

ODNI Review Group Comments
Jim W.

The primary problem is the bulk, suspicion-less acquisition of communications and metadata from third-parties like telecoms and ISPs.

The premise that it is not personal data if provided to a third-party shows the lack of integrity of elected officials and their blatant disregard for the constitution and the intent of 4th amendment.

This activity is not only illegal and unconstitutional, but also severely undermines our trust and confidence in elected officials and crucial communications systems.