A non-commissioned officer, also known as an NCO, is a member of the Army who has been given authority by a Commissioned Officer. The NCO corps is often referred to as "the backbone" of the Army. The NCOs are the primary leaders responsible for executing the military organization's mission and for training military personnel so they're prepared to execute the mission. NCOs provide advice and guidance to the officer corps. This role is particularly important for junior officers, who begin their careers in a position of authority but lack practical experience, including commanders at all levels. Senior NCOs, with their wealth of leadership, mission training and experience are the primary link between the bulk of the enlisted personnel and the officers in any military organization.

A physical exam is required as part of the enlistment process. The physical conducted at MEPS includes a blood test, urinalysis, as well as an eye and hearing test. There are some instances where a current or previous medical situation can be a disqualification. The doctor will discuss all past medical history, and make a determination if you are qualified to enlist. The Army has specific physical requirements and standards for each MOS. Some medical conditions (such as color blindness or poor vision) may prevent you from doing a particular job, but you may enlist in other jobs. It is important that you disclose all medical background information when speaking to a recruiter. This is for your safety and the safety of others.

A sole surviving son and/or daughter is the only remaining son or daughter in a family where the father, mother, or one or more sons or daughters served in the Armed Forces of the United States and because of the hazards with such military service was killed; died as a result of wounds, accident or disease; or is captured or MIA status, or is permanently 100-percent physically disabled (including 100-percent mental disability), as determined by the Veterans Administration or one of the Services, is hospitalized on a continuing basis and is not gainfully employed because of disability. Being an only child or the only remaining son/daughter does not qualify a soldier for sole survivor status. Contrary to popular belief, "only sons," "the last son to carry the family name," and "sole surviving sons" must register for the draft and can be drafted. However, they may be entitled to a peacetime deferment if there is a military death in the immediate family.

Dating back to the Revolutionary War, the Army cadence has been an important tradition that has withstood the test of time. Used to motivate, inspire and keep the Soldiers' steps in time, cadences foster a cohesive company while at the same time handing down the rich oral traditions of the U.S. Army. In addition, cadences help the Soldiers by controlling and strengthening their breathing during the strenuous marches and runs. To hear an Army cadence view this page.

Every Recruit who goes through basic training undergoes nuclear, biological, and chemical (NBC) training, and is subjected to training in the gas chamber. The reason for this is to gain confidence in your NBC equipment so you will be prepared if you need to use it in a real life situation. The gas chamber is a room that has a controlled concentration of CS (orto-chlorobenzylidene-malononitrile) gas, more commonly known as tear gas, the active ingredient in Mace and used for self defense and for riot control by the police. Tear gas is an irritant; specifically, it irritates mucous membranes in the eyes, nose, mouth and lungs, causing tearing, sneezing, coughing, etc.

For that matter, why is anything any color at all? The light we see things with from the sun or from light bulbs is called white light and can be broken down into the colors in the rainbow in order of their wavelengths. The snow is white, for example, because all the colors are reflected and refracted equally without any color range domination. This is not so when white light hits objects which we don't see as white or gray. Most objects tend to reflect only some of the light falling on them. The light traveling to the objects contains all of the colors, but the objects reflect selected colors and absorb the rest. This is called "subtractive color mixing" because some of the colors are subtracted out of the light. Grass appears green because all of the colors in the rainbow are absorbed into the leaves of the grass except green.

In times of need your Army Reserve unit may be called upon to deploy for full-time duty supporting the Active Duty Army. While deployed, Reserve Soldiers receive the same pay, benefits and privileges as Active Duty Soldiers. The length of deployment varies with the needs of the Army. Typically, deployments are one year or less. Currently, legislation is under review that will limit the frequency of Reserve deployments. Additionally, Reserve Soldiers' civilian jobs are protected during their deployments, so they can pick up where they left off upon returning home.

In times of war, deployment is likely. The possibility of deployment depends on your MOS and unit of assignment. All Soldiers must be strong, trained and ready upon assignment to a unit and prior to any deployment, including training exercises, humanitarian missions or combat operations. In general, deployments last a maximum of one year. If you join the Army at the age of 17, you will not be eligible to deploy until you are 18 years of age.

Officers may participate in two different Hometown or campus based recruiting programs. The Officer Recruiting Alumni Program (ORAP) allows officers that have recently completed commissioning requirements the opportunity to return to their college campus or a recruiting station near their hometown to share their experience with prospects. While this program is at the expense of the officer, it provides the officer opportunity to reconnect with friends and family. The Special Recruiter Assistance Program (SRAP) is for officers returning from combat operations. This program is at government expense and as a result is much more structured than ORAP. Emphasis is on sharing lessons learned with Cadets from the officers deployment experience. Approval must be obtained from the first Lt. Col. in the officer's chain of command and be supervised by an on-campus ROTC Professor of Military Science. However, SRAP does provide the officer time to reconnect with friends and family. Interested officers should contact U.S. Army Cadet Command for assistance in completing their ORAP/SRAP packets.

Overall, the Army has three categories of Soldiers: Enlisted, Warrant Officer and Officers. Each has its own specialized training, responsibilities and areas of expertise. Together, they are critical to the Army's ability to defend our country. Enlisted Soldiers put plans into action. Much like employees at a company, they perform specific jobs and have the knowledge that ensures the success of their unit's missions. Warrant Officers are highly specialized experts and trainers who progress within their specialized career fields. Officers implement strategic concepts at various levels of the Army, they are problem-solvers and planners who lead other Soldiers in all situations. For more information, view this page.

Prior Service applicants who desire to reenlist into the Army must meet all the basic qualifications and provide their discharge paperwork to a Recruiter. To determine if you meet the age requirements, subtract your total active duty time from your age. If this number is less than 35, you meet the age eligibility requirements for active duty. For the Army Reserve you must be able to retire with 20 years of federal service before the age of 60. Enlistment incentives and specialty training are usually not authorized, but may be available. Instead of attending basic training you may have to attend Warrior Transition Course (WTC). To see your options, incentives and processing requirements, contact your local Recruiter.

The 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) located at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, and nicknamed the "Screaming Eagles" is an airborne division of the U.S. Army primarily trained for air assault operations. During the Vietnam War, the 101st was re-designated an airmobile division, and later as an air assault division. The unit keeps the identifier of "airborne," but it does not conduct parachute operations at the division level.

The Big Red One refers to the 1st infantry Division. The Division's history began in 1917 when General John "Blackjack" Pershing arrived in France with the First American Expeditionary Force. The "Fighting First" led the way for American troops in World War I. The unit is identified by the big red "1." During World War II, the 1st Infantry Division was the first to reach England, the first to fight the enemy in North Africa and Sicily, the first on the beaches of Normandy in D-Day and the first to capture a major German City.

The blue color of the sky is due to Rayleigh scattering. As light moves through the atmosphere, most of the longer wavelengths pass straight through. Little of the red, orange and yellow light is affected by the air. However, much of the shorter wavelength light is absorbed by the gas molecules. The absorbed blue light is then radiated in different directions. It gets scattered all around the sky. Whichever direction you look, some of this scattered blue light reaches you. Since you see the blue light from everywhere overhead, the sky looks blue...you better remember this it's on the ASVAB! Okay, just kidding.

The specific training you receive in Army ROTC will teach you things like leadership development, military skills, military operations and tactics, command and staff functions, team dynamics, peer leadership, military justice, ethical decision making, personnel management and health and physical fitness. This will take place both in the classroom and in the field, but you will maintain a normal academic schedule like all college students. The best part about this leadership development training? You will use and benefit from it for years to come.

There are 12 inches in every foot, so to convert your height into inches you will need to multiply the number of inches in a foot (12) by the number of feet and add any extra inches. For example, if you are 5 feet 7 inches, multiply 12 by 5 which equals 60 inches, then add the remaining 7 inches. This will give you a total height of 67 inches.

To qualify for a security clearance, U.S. citizenship is needed. A permanent resident with an I-551 Green Card does not qualify for a security clearance. Therefore, a green card holder would not qualify for jobs that require a security clearance. There are several career field jobs that require a clearance; some of those jobs fall under Military Intelligence, Field Artillery, Air Defense Artillery, and Signal Communication. There are other jobs that may require a security clearance. Contact a Recruiter and they can tell you what jobs require a security clearance.

Your DD-214 will be necessary to be able to process for re-entry into the Army. It can take at least three months, and often up to seven, for your file to reach the National Personnel Records Center after your military obligation has ended (such as by discharge). For information on how to request your DD-214 and all other records that are in your file, view this page.

Your family and friends cannot attend basic training with you. But, in most cases Soldiers are allowed to take leave upon completion of all initial training. Family members and friends are encouraged to attend Family Day and the BCT graduation and the Soldier is afforded some time off to spend with them. Additionally, you can keep in touch through phone calls, letters and email during your free time.
