

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

P.L. 95-511

question of how many "cutouts" are enough to exempt an American acting on behalf of or in conjunction with a Communist regime from lawful electronic surveillance? Most Americans would probably agree that in such cases it would be better to err on the side of caution and tell the intelligence agencies to survey anyone working with such regimes. The bill ought to reflect this.

Finally, the very complexity of the standards must be judged a drawback. Even if they provided the Nation sufficient protection in peacetime, they would surely be too cumbersome to do so in time of war. In time of war, then, a new bill would have to be hastily enacted to provide for emergency powers. But emergency legislation is generally bad legislation. While we have the time we ought to enact a bill workable in bad times as well as in good times.

MALCOLM WALLOP.

HOUSE CONFERENCE REPORT NO. 95-1720

* * * * *

[page 19]

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1566) to amend title 18, United States Code, to authorize applications for a court order approving the use of electronic surveillance to obtain foreign intelligence information, submit the explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The managers recommend that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House, with an amendment. That amendment will be referred to here as the "conference substitute." Except for certain clarifying, clerical, conforming, and other technical changes, there follows an issue by issue summary of the Senate bill, the House amendments, and the conference substitute.

TITLE

The Senate bill amended Title 18 (Crimes and Criminal Procedures) of the United States Code, to authorize applications for a court order approving the use of electronic surveillance to obtain foreign intelligence information.

The House amendments provided for an uncodified title, to authorize electronic surveillance to obtain foreign intelligence information.

The conference substitute adopts the House provision. The conferees agree that this change is not intended to affect in any way the jurisdiction of Congressional Committees with respect to electronic surveillance for foreign intelligence purposes. Rather, the purpose of the change is solely to allow the placement of Title I of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act in that portion of the United States Code (Title 50) which most directly relates to its subject matter.

DEFINITION OF "FOREIGN POWER"

The Senate bill defined "foreign power", with respect to terrorist groups, to mean a foreign-based terrorist group.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

P.L. 95-511

[page 31]

NOTICE OF USE OF INFORMATION IN LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

The Senate bill provided for notification to the court when information derived from electronic surveillance is to be used in legal proceedings.

The House amendments contained a comparable provision and also a provision, not contained in the Senate bill, requiring notice to the aggrieved person. The House amendments also contained a separate section relating to use by State or local authorities requiring notice to the Attorney General.

The conference substitute adopts the House provisions. The conferees agree that notice should be given to the aggrieved person as soon as possible, so as to allow for the disposition of any motions concerning evidence derived from electronic surveillance. The conferees also agree that the Attorney General should at all times be able to assess whether and to what extent the use of information made available by the Government to a State or local authority will be used.

SUPPRESSION MOTIONS

The Senate bill provided for motions to suppress the contents of any communication acquired by electronic surveillance, or evidence derived therefrom.

The House amendments provided for motions to suppress the evidence obtained or derived from electronic surveillance.

The conference substitute adopts the House provision. The conferees agree that the broader term "evidence" should be used because it includes both the contents of communications and other information obtained or derived from electronic surveillance.

IN CAMERA PROCEDURE FOR DETERMINING LEGALITY

The Senate bill provided a single procedure for determining the legality of electronic surveillance in a subsequent in camera and ex parte proceeding, if the Government by affidavit asserts that disclosure or an adversary hearing would harm the national security of the United States. The Senate bill also provided that, in making this determination, the court should disclose to the aggrieved person materials relating to the surveillance only where such disclosure is necessary to make an accurate determination of the legality of the surveillance.

The House amendments provided two separate procedures for determining the legality of electronic surveillance, if the Attorney General files an affidavit under oath that disclosure would harm the national security of the United States or compromise foreign intelligence sources and methods. In criminal cases, there would be an in camera proceeding; and the court might disclose to the aggrieved person, under appropriate security procedures and protective orders, materials relating to the surveillance if there were a reasonable question as to the legality of the surveillance and if disclosure would likely promote a more accurate determination of such legality, or if disclosure would not harm the national security. In civil suits, there would be an in camera and ex parte proceeding before a court of appeals; and the court would disclose, under appropriate security procedures and protective orders, to the aggrieved person or his attorney materials relating to the surveillance only if necessary to afford due process to the aggrieved person. The House amendments also provided that orders regarding legality or disclosure would be final and binding.

[page 32]

The conference substitute essentially adopts the Senate provisions, with technical changes and the following modifications. The in camera and ex parte proceeding is invoked if the Attorney General files an affidavit under oath. All orders regarding legality and disclosure shall be final and binding only where the rulings are against the Government.

The conference substitute adds the words "requiring review or" to the provision making orders final and binding. This change clarifies the intent of the House provision in conformity with section 102(a). The conferees intend that a determination by a district court that review of a certification by the Attorney General under section 102(a) is necessary to determine the legality of the surveillance shall be considered a final and binding order and thus appealable by the Government before the court reviews the certification. The court may order that the certification be unsealed for review if such review is necessary to determine the legality of the surveillance.

The conferees agree that an in camera and ex parte proceeding is appropriate for determining the lawfulness of electronic surveillance in both criminal and civil cases. The conferees also agree that the standard for disclosure in the Senate bill adequately protects the rights of the aggrieved person, and that the provision for security measures and protective orders ensures adequate protection of national security interests.

UNINTENTIONAL RADIO ACQUISITION

The Senate bill prohibited any use of the contents of unintentionally acquired domestic radio communications, if there is a reasonable expectation of privacy and a warrant would be required for law enforcement purposes, except where the contents indicate a threat of death or serious bodily harm to any person.

The House amendments contained a comparable provision, with an exception if the contents may indicate a threat of death or serious bodily harm to any person.

The conference substitute adopts the Senate provision which omits the word "may." The conferees agree that an exception for any indication of such a threat is sufficient.

CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT

The Senate bill and the House amendments both require the Attorney General, on a semiannual basis, to fully inform the intelligence committees of each House concerning all electronic surveillance under the act.

The Senate bill also stated that "nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to limit the authority and responsibility of the appropriate committees of each House of Congress to obtain such information as they may need to carry out their respective functions and duties."

The House amendments limited this reservation to the respective intelligence committees. The conference substitute adopts the Senate version.

Section 2523(b) of the Senate bill required the Senate Intelligence Committee to report annually to the Senate on the implementation of the act, with recommendations as to whether it should be amended or repealed. The House amendments contained no similar provision.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

P.L. 95-511

[page 33]

Section 108(b) of the House amendments required the respective intelligence committees when, through review of the information provided by the Attorney General, they determined that a surveillance of a U.S. person produced no foreign intelligence information and the national security would not be harmed, to notify the target of such surveillance.

The conference substitute adopts a modified version of the Senate provision, requiring an annual review for only five years, and deletes the House provision.

Pursuant to the resolutions establishing each, both the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, currently possess the authority granted in the deleted House provision. However, it may be appropriate to further delineate the authority in separate legislation. The conferees expect that the annual reviews to be conducted by the respective intelligence committees will fully examine this issue.

CRIMINAL PENALTIES

The Senate bill provided, by conforming amendment to title 18, United States Code, for criminal penalties for any person who, under color of law, willfully engages in electronic surveillance except as provided in this bill; for any person who willfully discloses, or endeavors to disclose, to any other person information obtained under color of law by electronic surveillance, knowing or having reason to know that the information was obtained through unlawful electronic surveillance; and for any person who willfully uses, or endeavors to use, information obtained through unlawful electronic surveillance.

The House amendments provided for separate criminal penalties in this act, rather than by conforming amendment to title 18, for any person who intentionally engages in electronic surveillance under color of law except as authorized by statute. A defense was provided for a defendant who was a law enforcement or investigative officer engaged in the course of his official duties and the electronic surveillance was authorized by and conducted pursuant to a search warrant or court order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

The conference substitute adopts the House provision modified to add the Senate criminal penalty for any person who discloses or uses information obtained under color of law by electronic surveillance, knowing or having reason to know that the information was obtained through electronic surveillance not authorized by statute. The conferees agree that the criminal penalties for intelligence agents under this Act should be essentially the same as for law enforcement officers under title 18.

CIVIL LIABILITY

The Senate bill provided, by conforming amendment to title 18, United States Code, that any person other than a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power (as defined with respect to officers or employees of foreign powers and certain other nonresident aliens) who has been subject to electronic surveillance, or about whom information has been disclosed or used, in violation of the criminal penalty provisions, should have a civil cause of action against any person who so acted.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

P.L. 95-511

[page 34]

The House amendments provided for separate civil liability under this act, rather than by conforming amendment to title 18. Any person other than a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power (as defined with respect to officers, members, or employees of a foreign power) who has been subjected to an electronic surveillance or whose communication has been disseminated or used in violation of the criminal penalty provisions was granted a cause of action against any person who committed such violation.

The conference substitute adopts the House provision, modified to grant a cause of action to any aggrieved person about whom information has been disclosed or used in violation of the criminal penalty provisions. The conferees agree that the civil liability of intelligence agents under this act should coincide with the criminal liability. The conferees also agree that the House provisions regarding suits by certain nonresident aliens would have the same practical effect as the Senate provision.

AUTHORIZATION DURING TIME OF WAR

The House amendments contained a provision which would allow the President to authorize electronic surveillance for periods up to a year during time of war declared by Congress. The Senate bill had no comparable provision.

The conference substitute retains the House language but adds the further requirement that the Attorney General inform the intelligence committees of the facts and circumstances giving rise to the need for such authority, the scope of such authority, and the standards to be employed in exercising such authority.

The conference substitute adopts a compromise provision authorizing the President, through the Attorney General, to authorize electronic surveillance without a court order under this title to acquire foreign intelligence information for a period not to exceed 15 calendar days following a declaration of war by the Congress.

The conferees intend that this period will allow time for consideration of any amendment to this act that may be appropriate during a wartime emergency. The conferees also intend that all other provisions of this act not pertaining to the court order requirement shall remain in effect during this period. The conferees expect that such amendment would be reported with recommendations within 7 days and that each House would vote on the amendment within 7 days thereafter.

CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

The Senate bill contained certain conforming amendments to existing law, including a provision regarding assistance by common carriers in the conduct of electronic surveillance that imposed civil liability for violations.

The House amendments deleted several of the conforming amendments, and expanded the class of persons who are covered by the provision regarding assistance in the conduct of electronic surveillance under this bill and chapter 119 of title 18, United States Code, to include "landlords, custodians, and other persons." This provision pro-